

Welcome to the final module of the course and well done for reaching this point!

In this final module we continue to explore some tools and resources that can help you not only address coding or programming related areas but also web editing, internet search, computer networks and esafety. These areas are sometimes overlooked with all the hype around coding at the moment but are no less important to address with our students.

In this module we also have a big activity which has a deadline. The first thing to highlight here is that we have extended the first deadline of the course which was originally on the 17th May to the 20th May at 23:59h Brussels time. By this date you need to have submitted your completed Learning Diary. We have seen a lot of great diaries on the course so we don't want you to feel rushed in completing these, which is why we have extended the deadline. Please note that all other deadlines remain the same. So the final, final deadline to complete all quizzes, activities and in particular to submit the peer reviews is still on the 24th May.

It is important that you closely read the instructions for all the different stages of the activity. The first stage asks you to prepare a lesson plan that incorporates some of the ideas or resources introduced on the course. A link to this lesson plan should then be the final entry on your Learning Diary which you have to submit as part of the 2nd stage of the activity. In a 3rd stage, you then have to review two diaries of other course participants. You will be assigned these two diaries automatically as soon as you have submitted your own diary.

For the lesson plan and for the reviews you can find an example within the relevant sections. Look at these first to be sure you know what to do.

We very much hope that this course has introduced you to some useful tools, resources, activity ideas as well as concepts that can help you in your daily teaching practice. Please continue sharing your ideas and resources from your countries via social media and the Padlets. We will be in touch again via email. Until then goodbye!
